PhD Scholarship: Pathways to Prevention Project

$26,140 per annum (for up to 4 years)

An exciting opportunity is available for an outstanding student to work fulltime on the Pathways to Prevention Project within the Key Centre for Ethics, Law, Justice and Governance at Griffith University. The Project operates within a developmental prevention and community development framework and since 2001 has been providing a range of early intervention activities that include school-based programs and family support initiatives. The PhD project, which is funded by the Australian Research Council, will focus on the longitudinal follow-up of a cohort of children and families who participated in the project between the years 2001-2003.

- Excellent research support will be provided for the successful applicant, who is expected to have a good honours (minimum 2A) or equivalent in psychology, education, sociology, public health, criminology or another relevant discipline.
- Strong quantitative and statistical skills are required, as well as communication and organisational skills.
- Applicants must be Australian citizens or permanent residents.

The PhD project will be supervised by Professor Ross Homel and other members of the project team. For more information contact Professor Homel (email: R.Homel@griffith.edu.au ph: 07-37355757) or Dr Kate Freiberg (email: K.Freiberg@griffith.edu.au ph: 07-37356909).

Please submit an expression of interest (including your full cv and areas of interest) to Professor Homel ASAP as it is hoped an appointment will be made by the end of March 2009.
